

Furniture not fit for purpose – Give your staff the right tools!!

Situation: Coca Cola had outgrown their existing factory and administration offices based in Lisburn. After searching for suitable new sites they decided to build a new factory and office block for 800 personnel. They also needed to review the use and design of the new building in terms of new and projected changes in working practices.

Pain Points
Accommodating future needs	The new premises needed to be designed to accommodate not only current but also projected future operational needs while at the same time reflecting their brand and new working practices.
Design	The client needed to allow for more flexible working, better communication and staff participation leading to greater productivity. It was also necessary to reflect their brand throughout the new office block.
Costs	The client required accurate costs for both the fit out (partitions, flooring, decoration) and furniture.
Project management	The offices needed to be fitted out in a short time frame.
Implementation	The client needed someone to hold their hand and guide them through the complete project from design costing, through project management and relocation.

Solution: We worked with Coca Cola in the design and space planning of the new building. On agreement of the design and space planning we supplied and installed all of the furniture, partitions, flooring and decoration.

Benefits
Space planning and design	Coca Cola where able to match their needs with their brand and accommodate all 250 admin staff
Space for growth	Accommodate future staff growth
Brand	One cohesive brand was established throughout the whole office.
Working practices	The furniture chosen suited the style of working for teams and individuals
Project management	As the main contractor for the interiors we liaised with the building contractor on the client's behalf taking the headache out of managing the project.
Fixed costs	The price quoted was the price paid - no over run costs
Improved efficiency	Business practices and staff became more efficient

Total implementation and management of the project allowed them to concentrate on their own business

For a free consultation on how to chose the most appropriate furniture for your staff contact us on 02890 770019