

GLAZED PARTITIONING

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Increasing staff productivity is a fundamental goal for any business, and by looking at how an office environment can directly influence performance is fundamental in designing an efficient and effective workplace.

The key to providing an effective working environment for your staff is to ensure a balance between the need for space, privacy, team-working and employee satisfaction.

Particularly within an open plan workspace this can become increasingly difficult. The use of glazed partitioning systems solves all these problems by providing a visually spacious environment which promotes an awareness of collaboration and openness, defines private work areas and allows an abundance of natural light into the office.

KEY CONSIDERATIONS:

1. Creative Space

2. Lighten your budget

3. Moving with the times

4. One pane or two?

- Single Glazed
- Double Glazed

5. Adding style to your office

1. Creative Space

One of the major benefits of glazed partitioning is the feeling of vast openness that it creates, providing a more visually stimulating environment for your staff. It can also promote collaborative thinking by removing barriers between groups of employees, while at the same time providing your staff with much needed private working areas.

2. Lighten your budget?

The distribution of natural light not only has an affect on your employees, but also on your company finances. If the amount of natural light within the office is restricted, there will be a need for increased levels of artificial light, increasing electricity bills.

3. Moving with the times

One of the major advantages of glazed partitioning systems is that they are fully demountable. This means that if your office needs change, either for creating more space, or requiring additional private rooms, the partitioning can be dismantled with ease, and reconfigured to meet your new requirements.

Glazed partitioning systems offer an ultra modern, contemporary approach to office design, creating not only a positive atmosphere for your employees, but it also projects a perception of positivity and forward thinking to your clients.

4. One pane or two?

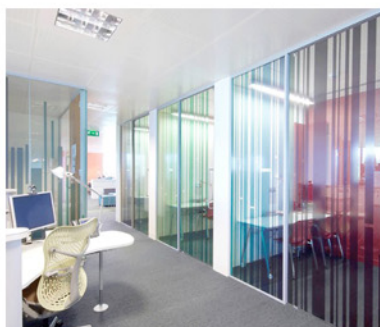

At Office Interior Solutions, we are distributors for Optima, the UK's leading manufacturer of demountable partitioning systems. All Optima systems are manufactured to the highest standards, offering various levels of acoustic privacy and fire resistance, to suit your office requirements.

If you are considering glazed partitioning for your office space, there are some considerations that will influence your choice of single or double glazed systems:

Single Glazed - Single glazed systems create an atmosphere of space through vast areas of virtually seamless glass. Single glazed systems offer a wide range of design options, while still offering levels of privacy by utilising a minimal number of components which facilitates the speed of erection.

Double Glazed - Double glazed systems are used to provide higher levels of acoustic performance and privacy, with the added benefit and option of integral blinds. Offering additional levels of fire resistance, double glazed partitioning is extremely efficient and cost effective for meeting rooms and open plan office solutions.

5. Adding style to your office

Customising your office space and creating a personal space couldn't be easier with glazed partitioning systems. The use of vinyl graphics offers greater style and aesthetics, whilst providing additional privacy.

Pictures or graphics can be applied to any glass partitioning, and can be provided with any custom design you wish. They can incorporate the company logo and branding, as well as artwork and imagery, such as landscapes or people.

Not only does this provide a visually stimulating approach to office design and aesthetics, the use of graphics offers additional privacy to offices while still allowing the flow of natural light into your office space.

Whether you're relocating or refurbishing an existing office, glazed partitioning systems offer the flexibility and design to modernise your business and promote a better working environment for your staff.

At Office Interior Solutions we provide professional advice and guidance, as well as solutions that will meet all your business needs and budgetary requirements.
